Overview of the Regulation of Lobbying Act

The Regulation of Lobbying Act 2015 provides that if a person who falls within the scope of the Act communicates with a designated public official about a relevant matter, it is lobbying. Anyone lobbying must register and submit regular online returns of lobbying activity.

The register itself is a web-based system. There is no cost to register, to submit returns or to access the information contained therein. While the Commission has oversight responsibility for the establishment and maintenance of the register, the content is driven by the information contained in the registrations and returns submitted by registrants.

Persons within the scope of the Act include:

- persons with more than 10 employees,
- representative bodies and advocacy bodies with at least one employee,
- third parties communicating on behalf of a client (who fits one of the above criteria) in return for pay, and
- anyone lobbying about the development or zoning of land.

The Three-Step Test

To be considered lobbying, all components of the following three-step test must be met:

1. The person communicating must fall within the scope of the Act.
2. The communication must be made personally (directly or indirectly) to a designated public official.
3. The communication must concern a relevant matter. If all three components of the test are met, it is lobbying.

Designated public officials include Ministers and Ministers of State, Members of Dáil Éireann and Seanad Éireann, Members of the European Parliament for Irish constituencies, and Members of Local Authorities. The category also includes Special Advisors and the senior-most civil and public servants which have been designated by Ministerial order. A relevant matter is one to do with the initiation, development or modification of any public policy or of any public programme, the preparation of an enactment, or the award of any grant, loan or other financial support, contract or other agreement, or of any licence or other authorisation involving public funds. Matters dealing with the zoning and development of land are relevant communications. The Act provides for a number of exemptions to what is considered a relevant matter, which are set out in section 5(5) of the Act.

If you are lobbying, you must register and submit regular returns of lobbying activity on the online Register of Lobbying.
